CULINARY USES

Java long pepper, known as "cabe Jawa" in Indonesia, is a spice that adds a unique flavor to various dishes. It can be used in marinades, soups, and stews, enhancing the overall taste with its distinct, slightly sweet, and spicy profile.

Galangal commonly used in soups like tom yum and tom kha gai, as well as in curry pastes and seafood dishes, adding a unique flavor that is both spicy and aromatic.

Turmeric is a vibrant yellow spice commonly used in cooking, especially in Asian cuisines. It adds flavor, color, and potential health benefits to dishes like curries, soups, and stews.

MEDICINE USES

Java long pepper is traditionally used in Indonesian medicine for various ailments. It is believed to help alleviate flu, fever, respiratory issues, and even low blood pressure, showcasing its significance in herbal remedies.

Galangal is used in traditional medicine for various purposes, including treating digestive disorders, reducing inflammation, and fighting infections. It is also believed to support male fertility and may have antioxidant and antimicrobial properties.

Turmeric, known for its active compound curcumin, is widely recognized for its anti-inflammatory and antioxidant properties. It is often used in traditional medicine to help with conditions like arthritis, digestive issues, and even as a potential cancer preventive.
